Advise undergraduates and graduate students in majors/fields of applied economics and management, conservation and sustainable development, economics, environmental and sustainability science, international agriculture and rural development, international development, natural resources, policy analysis and management, and public affairs. Broad research and outreach program on international poverty, food security, agricultural development, economic growth, agricultural economics, sustainability, and applied microeconomics and econometrics. 2008-present. Professor, 2003-7, Associate Professor, 1998-2003, Professor, Department of Economics 2011-22, Professor, Department of Global Development 2020-22, Professor, Cornell Jeb E. Brooks School of Public Policy, 2021-present.

Founding Deputy Dean and Dean of Academic Affairs, SC Johnson College of Business, Cornell University. Primary responsibility for oversight of all faculty and academic teaching and research programs, student services, and diversity, equity and inclusion efforts in a newly created College comprised of 3 AACSB-accredited business schools offering 17 degree programs (2 undergraduate, 12 Masters, 3 Ph.D.), >1,600 undergraduate majors, ~3,000 undergraduate minors, ~1,300 professional and graduate students, ~240 faculty, ~350 administrative and professional staff, and annual operating budget of >$250 million. Managed academic transition of merging three Schools into one College, including drafting the core faculty governance documents, developing promotion and tenure guidelines, research support and other faculty policies. Led College academic and faculty affairs (faculty hiring and promotion, research resource allocation, curricular oversight, faculty and student policies, etc.), diversity and inclusion, and student services (admissions, advising, career services, registrar) activities. College ran budget surpluses each year while expanding faculty by >10%, launching 2 new degree programs, and doubling undergraduate and growing all graduate program applications. 2016-2018.

David J. Nolan Director, the Charles H. Dyson School of Applied Economics and Management, Cornell University. Overall executive responsibility for School with ~60 faculty, ~ 65 staff, ~100 graduate students, ~750 undergraduate majors, and ~2,100 undergraduate minors. Dyson School faculty taught ~24,000 student credit hours and conducted >$6 million in externally sponsored research each year on annual revenues of >$55 million and an endowment of >$65 million. Dyson's graduate and undergraduate programs each rank in the top five nationally, while its research and outreach/extension programs are internationally recognized for innovation, productivity and impact. Ran budget surpluses each year while expanding faculty by >15%. 2013-2016.

Founding Associate Director for Economic Development, Cornell Atkinson Center for Sustainability, Cornell University, 2008-2012. Faculty Fellow, 2009-2021. Senior Faculty Fellow 2021-present. As Associate Director, helped found major new interdisciplinary research and public engagement center on sustainability science. Intimately involved in the design of various research support initiatives (e.g., academic venture fund, innovation for impact fund), led the launch of strategic collaboration with CARE, and helped craft Center policies and procedures.
